Improving outcomes for people with mental health problems in the emergency department

This is a Queensland based National Health and Medical Research Council (NHMRC) funded research project designed to inform and improve the emergency treatment and management of people with acute mental health problems accessing EDs.

We are seeking expressions of interest to provide expert perspective on interventions that can be delivered to people with mental health problems in the ED setting in Queensland. If you

- are a registered nurse, medical officer, or psychologist
- work a minimum of 0.2 FTE
- work in a public hospital within Australia

Your expertise would contribute to this study.

We will select people who fit our criteria to attend a group session which is expected to last no more than 2 hours. This research will be conducted in Queensland and if travel or accommodation is required for you to participate it will be paid for.

Additional information is in the attached Participant Information Sheet/Consent Form.

If you are interested in participating or have any questions about the research please contact
